A death machine dreamed up by an assisted suicide advocate in 2018 appears to now be a reality in Switzerland. The Sarco machine, short for “sarcophagus,” was developed by Exit International and has cleared legal review, meaning it could start operating as soon as next year. Australian euthanasia activist Philip Nitschke designed the Sarco machine to be easily available—it is able to be created using a 3D-printer—and even comes with its own coffin ... “The capsule is sitting on a piece of equipment that will flood the interior with nitrogen, rapidly reducing the oxygen level to 1 per cent from 21 per cent in about 30 seconds,” Nitschke told SwissInfo. “The person will feel a little disoriented and may feel slightly euphoric before they lose consciousness. Death takes place through hypoxia and hypocapnia, oxygen and carbon dioxide deprivation, respectively. There is no panic, no choking feeling.” ... He [Nitschke] also wants to get doctors out of the business of suicide. “Currently a doctor or doctors need to be involved to prescribe the sodium pentobarbital and to confirm the person’s mental capacity,” he continued. “We want to remove any kind of psychiatric review from the process and allow the individual to control the method themselves ... our original conceptual idea is that the person would do an online test and receive a code to access the Sarco.” (Live Action News, 12/8/21; Christian Life Resources “LifeWire,” 12/9/21)

Speaking up For Life

“God is not just our God or the God of just our people or just our nation or our congregation or our denomination or our demographic category or our tribe or our ethnicity or our language. There is no justice if it’s just about just us. No, God is the God of all time and all space and all people. In Christ, all things hang together. Step into your new year with this fresh recognition that the Holy Spirit wants to fill every nook and cranny of your life until you overflow with God’s everlasting love for everybody.”

Pastor John Nunes on The Lutheran Hour

“Abortion isn’t something happening in another state or county or city. It is happening right in our backyards. And now we know many [who have had abortions] attend churches regularly and are sitting in our church pews looking for answers. May the Lord provide the answers needed to send a message of hope and forgiveness as well as proclaiming abortion to not be in God’s will.” Virginia J. Flo, Minnesota Regional Director & National Conference Director for Lutherans For Life
